TIPS AND SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS

- Snowshoeing is a great winter activity. However, if you are an avid hiker, you may think that a 10 km hike is nothing, but when it comes to snowshoeing your body is working much harder - estimated as 50% to 75% harder than hiking. Your pace will be roughly 1.5 to 2 times slower.
- You can prepare for this difference as follows:
 - Know your limits for physical activities
 - Wear appropriate clothing
 - dress in layers - long underwear (on very cold days) , fleece, soft shell jacket and pants
 - waterproof breathable rain pants with leg vents
 - hats and gloves
 - waterproof walking boots
 - moccasins/soft soled boots if using traditional wooden snowshoes with lamp wick bindings
 - Gaiters (to stop snow from falling into your boots)
 - Use ski poles or walking sticks to help with balance on uneven terrain and steep slopes. Use of poles also adds an upper-body workout
